

Washington University in St. Louis
Faculty of Arts & Sciences
Department of Education

Policies and programs to reshape and improve urban schools and neighborhoods require universities to invest in scholars and teachers capable of contributing to the knowledge base and policy discussions associated with urban life in the United States and abroad. Washington University in St. Louis has an ongoing commitment to urban education. Toward this end, the Department of Education in Arts & Sciences seeks to hire a colleague to further strengthen high quality programs of research and teaching in the area of urban education.

Language Search (Rank: Assistant Professor). We welcome applications from language scholars with academic backgrounds including, but not limited to, the psychology of language, reading, applied linguistics, sociolinguistics, social policy, or learning disabilities. Multidisciplinary research and teaching are encouraged. The successful candidate will demonstrate considerable promise for conducting an exemplary research program on some aspect of first and/or second language development. Opportunities include participation in the new and developing undergraduate program in Applied Linguistics as well as the related graduate programs. Additional expectations include commitment to the teaching mission of the Department of Education and the College and Graduate School of Arts & Sciences. Doctoral degree required at the time of appointment.

Candidates should submit a CV, a letter of application, and arrange for at least three letters of reference to be sent directly to: Marilyn Broughton, Washington University, One Brookings Drive, Campus Box 1183, St. Louis, Missouri 63130-4899. Applications will be considered until the position is filled; priority will be given to those received by January 4, 2008. We anticipate a fall 2008 start date. We especially encourage applications from women and members of minority groups. Washington University in St. Louis is an equal opportunity employer. Employment eligibility verification required upon hire.
